Interesting West Virginia Facts

West Virginia is the only state completely within the Appalachian Mountain range, aptly given the nickname the Mountain State.

North America's largest alluvial diamond was found in Peterstown. It is known as the Punch Jones Diamond after William "Punch" Jones and his father Grover found the diamond in 1928.

Outdoor advertising got its start in Wheeling when the Bloch Brothers Tobacco Company painted bridges and barns with "Treat Yourself to the Best, Chew Mail Pouch."

The first rural free delivery mail service took place in 1896 in Charles Town through the Post Office Department's pilot program to determine the feasibility for rural delivery for the rest of the country.

Harrisville is home to America's oldest dime store, Berdine's Five and Dime, which has been continuously operating since 1908.

West Virginia is the third most forested state. In fact, the Monongahela National Forest covers nearly a million acres of land and spans across 10 counties.

Contrary to its name, the New River is actually one of the oldest in the world and unusually flows south to north because it was formed before the mountains.
